

Story board ideas
Souls borne game
Horror
Similar to bloodborne

Folklore monsters?

The story could follow dreams and nightmares with these dreams following the actions of the character(main) in which the character (main) would be suffering in these dreams due to some past sins/ cvrimis he has committed we dont need to go into detail upon these crimes as they would be representdted in the environment and enemy design for example.

The wendigo in traditional folklore is a beast made form greed and hunger possessing humans in which this enemy could be a boss of sorts with the horns taking on a more devil like shape in the character would be burdened by his sins of greed

The main characters backstory could be one of your choosing from three options changing the first boss of the game only depicting your sins. For example one would be of a business man wanting a better life their family so they greedily took from others until the point of no return taking him to the eternal dream. The next would be a serial killer which killed to th epoint where his name was everyrwhere similar to jack the ripper he was feared until the day that fear took him to the eternal dream. The motivation of the serial killer would be that of a broken family where he was mistreated the son of a hunter whom hunted to satiate his hunger even though he had the money to buy food his household was that akin to the survival of the strongest picked on by his siblings to a breaking point where he lashed out from then on killing those who he thinks are bad people in brutal ways.

THE ETERNAL DREAM

In the dream people cannot die so there are many maniacs whom lost their spirit due to failing to break the curse these people are like (but are not) zombies. Following no reason but the one to EAT to survive found usually at ponds of water to drink or at places where there are a ton of corpses to drink the blood and eat the meat.

In the dream the only value people have is their sanity and skill in which they use as a resource similar to currency as sanity is treated like food as sanity is manifested as tears the more you cry in the dream the faster you lose your sanity. The people use these tears to give themselves sanity and as money.

In the dream factions are made these factions want different goals the people whom follow the dream are called

The eternal dream is akin to the hunters nightmare in bloodborne, a place of torment to those who have committed something unspeakable trapped until the curse is broken. Of course this curse is different for each person. The eternal dream is similar to an entity something that can see you as you are its always watching your actions and your responses to the point where a religion is formed in the eternal dream as in the eternal dream many people stay as they cannot escape as they have not the strength to break their own curse so they band together to form towns in that nightmare place. The religion is not one but multiple, each following an aspect of the eternal dream as the eternal dream is made for punishment each for different purposes; those who follow the eternal dream religiously notice the different constructs of it. As the dream is something a mortal cannot grasp its an idea and a thing it breathes and yet doesn't live. It kills with purpose but speaks no words. We cannot understand it therefore the religion follows different parts of the eternal dream. The ones that follow its cold and strict punishment of the dream followers of the type are sadistic and masochistic as they see the people of the eternal dream sinners those irredeemable they go around chopping limbs and torturing people of the dream to punish them for the dream wearing chains with thorns in them. They call it fair as when they wear their chains and thorns they are accepting the dream giving them the permission to hurt other people of the dream.